Setting & Flavor:

An adventure series set in the Fatemaster campaign setting.

This campaign is intended to run over the course of several in-game years and involves taking a party of adventurers from Novice rank all the way to Legendary.

Characters are members of the Fated, a group of individuals selected by providence to provide the motive force for an age. Also called Star-Marked, the Fated are closely tied to the movement of celestial bodies in space.

This campaign features overland adventuring more than dungeon crawling. Players should be involved in the political events of the world and should be doing considerable travel. On those occasions when a dungeon or dungeon-like environment needs to be explored, it should be no more than 4-6 rooms in size. Keep it fast and furious.

This document is for Game Master's eyes only.

The Back Story:

A new Age has dawned on Skaern and with it a new echelon of Fated individuals are coming into their celestially ordained powers. The player characters are counted amongst these paragons, though they do not know it yet. There are, however, people in the world who know the truth; they know what the Fated are and, more importantly, who they are. As you can imagine, the possessors of this dangerous knowledge are up to no good.

A scholar and astronomer named Valder Harlock has figured out that by observing the movements of celestial bodies through his telescope, he can identify and track all 53 of the Fated. His explorations into Celestial Infinity have steadily driven him mad. Filled with a sense of insane purpose, Valder created a Cult venerating the alien beings of the Void and set about architecting a plan to achieve godhood by harnessing the power of the Fated. This "Cult of the Starstrider" is Valder Harlock's instrument to bring about his ascendancy.

Recently, the Player Characters have fallen under Harlock's gaze. He has dispatched forces to kidnap the party members so that he can utilize them in one of his experiments...

Getting Started:

As each player generates their character for the campaign, have them draw a card from a standard deck of playing cards to determine their "star sign". Consult Appendix A below to see which power set the character inherits. These powers do not begin to manifest until the player achieves Seasoned rank but for now take note of who has what power and keep the information secret from the player.

Next, refer to Appendix B and cross off the entries that correspond to the players' star signs. The player characters will take the place of these non-player characters. In some cases, this may eliminate a character that is important to the overall story of the campaign. If this occurs, you can keep those characters in the story as normal Wild Cards but they will not have any Fated powers.

Play begins with the first adventure SS1: Bad Stars. It would seem that a certain leader of a certain cult has discovered something special about the party members and is going to great lengths to capture them... I wonder what for?

Running the Campaign:

The first adventure series, Cult of the Starstrider, is intended to get the campaign off the ground and to introduce the party members to their new powers gradually over the course of four modules. By the end of this initial series, the party members should be Seasoned rank and should have figured out what's going on with the Fated. At this point it will be up to the party to decide what they want to do and where they want to go next – perhaps they'll decide to kick off their own plot for world domination?

The information in Appendix C is intended to give the Fatemaster a global view of what's going on in the world at large during the first year of the campaign. The other Fated will not remain idle while the party sorts out its business. If they choose to drag their heels and let the world come to them, use the events in this calendar to drive conflicts that might pique the party's interest.

Killing a Fated:

If one of the Fated is slain by another Fated, a transference of power occurs between the two individuals that leaves the survivor stronger than before. Some measure of the victim's life energy transpires into their slayer granting them permanent statistical bonuses. Draw on the table below every time a player kills another Fated to see what their reward is.

A Fated who dies by the hand of a normal person or through misadventure simply expires. There is no transfer of power in this case.

When a Fated kills one of their brethren, the death is permanent. A character slain by another Fated cannot be resurrected because a critical portion of their soul has been absorbed by their slayer.

| Card | Effect |
| 2 | Gain 1 Experience Point |
| 3 | Gain 2 Experience Points |
| 4 | Permanently gain one die of Strength |

| Joker | Gain all of the Powers of the defeated Fated (see Powers of the Fated below) |

Convergence of Fated:

When one of the Fated puts their banner in the ground, things around them change; when a number of Fated choose to cooperate with one another and jointly work toward some goal they can alter the destinies of nations. The synergy produced by this union is called a Convergence. Not every Fated realizes that Convergences are possible, but those who learn this fact will often seek out other Fated of like minds to form super groups that can accomplish world-shaping tasks.

Whenever Fated are within 12 squares of each other, they can freely share Bennies. Additionally, when a group of Fated elects to spend Bennies simultaneously they can do one of the following things:

| Bennies Spent | Effects |
| 2-3 | Minor Convergence: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • In Combat: The entire party gains a +1 to all rolls for 3 rounds • Out of Combat: The next roll made by a single party member gains a +4 bonus |
| 4-5 | Convergence: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • In Combat: Force your opponents to pass a Spirit -2 check or become Awed by your presence. Awed targets cower in supplication and disengage from combat. Other Fated are immune to this power. • Out of Combat: Something unexpectedly lucky happens to the party (i.e. they find a clue that helps to solve a problem, find extra treasure, stumble across a helpful NPC, etc.) |
| 6+ | Major Convergence: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • In Combat: You can either force your opponents to pass a Spirit -4 check or become Awed or your entire party gains an extra action for 3 rounds. • Out of Combat: You create a Locus, a place where world-shaping events will take place in the future. Like a beacon, the locus begins attracting hirelings and henchmen from the surrounding area at a rate of 1d6+4 per week. These followers are Extras who are willing to swear themselves into the party's service. The party can only create one locus at a time; a new Locus replaces the old one. If the party splinters apart, the followers are divided amongst the members and the Locus is terminated. |

Everyone in the party must spend a Benny to trigger a Convergence. For example, in a party of six, you can't just have 2 decide to spend Bennies for the benefit of the whole group.

To keep players in suspense about the true nature of being Fated, don't explain Convergences right away. Let the players gradually figure out how it works, providing small clues along the way. For example, whenever someone in the party uses a Benny have everyone else feel a strange, pulling sensation as if being magnetically attracted to that person. Over time, the party should figure out that Bennies have additive effects, and this should lead to an exploration of why that is the case.

Dealing with Character Death and Inter-Party Conflict:

Once the players figure out what their characters are, it won't take long for the more devious members of your gaming group to contemplate mass murder in the name of gaining additional powers. To offset this selfish attraction, the Game Master should accentuate the benefits of a Fated Convergence. When Fated choose to work together, they are able to do things that a powerful loner cannot.

If a character dies or retires, they do not come back as a "new" Fated with their subsequent character. There are only a set number of Fated in the world and they are selected at birth. If the character was not murdered by another Fated, it is possible to be restored via Resurrection but this can be costly and difficult to arrange.

A merciful Game Master may desire to have a player in good standing return to the game as another one of the remaining Fated left in the campaign. This would require an agreement on the player's part to play the character as it was intended and would require some narrative prestidigitation to allow the returned player to re-join the adventuring party.

A player can always return to the game as a "non-Fated" character who just happens to travel with or support the party.

Appendix A: Powers of the Fated:

As a Fated grows in experience, their capabilities mature and develop. Consult the table below to see what powers each Fated gains as they proceed through the ranks of Seasoned, Veteran and Heroic.

All Fated have an inherent ability to detect others of their kind. They can detect the presence of any other Fated within a 12 square radius (usually felt as a rising of the neck hairs or a tingling sensation). This ability improves as the character gains in level.

| Card | Seasoned | Veteran | Heroic |
| All | Improved Detect Fated: You can detect Fated over a 24 square radius | Greater Detect Fated: You can detect Fated over a city-wide area (1d4 miles) | Superior Detect Fated: Your detection sense is fine-tuned enough to track Fated across any distance. |

This includes the use of any Detect Fated abilities. | Joker's Friend: When you spend a Benny you get a +2 bonus to the subsequent re-roll | Locus Master: Spend all of your remaining Bennies to create a Locus , without the participation of other Fated . See " Convergence of Fated " for more details. |

A number of Powers give characters the ability to track people and objects. These tracking powers do not reveal the target's precise location but work like a compass: they indicate direction and proximity. In cases where more than one potential target are present, the ability homes in on the strongest signal.

Appendix B: The Fated

There are 53 Fated in every Age. Below is a list of the current crop of Fated. When the party members are created, have them draw a card and consult the table below. The party members will replace whichever Fated is listed under that entry. Replaced characters are still active in the campaign; they merely will not be one of the Fated.

Some sages have learned how to locate and track the Fated by paying close attention to stellar movements. The science of Astronomy has become especially important as a means for the learned to keep tabs on the movements and actions of the Fated. Anyone who learns this skill and has the necessary equipment can eventually learn how to zero in on a particular Fated's location.

The Fated progress in level at roughly the same rate the party does. As the party members become Seasoned, the Fated will also increase in rank.

| Card | Name | Starting Location | Description |
|------|----------------------|------------------------------|--|
| 2♣ | Uthrid Nasan | Nightglass, Denshen | Uthrid is an astronomer working out of the Nightglass Observatory in Denshen. He has recently devised a method for tracking and cataloging the movements of the Fated and is in the middle of writing a book about it. |
| 3♣ | Ironbane | Merkish, Middlemark | A commoner who worked in the slag factories of Merkish, the man named Ironbane has become disgusted with how mechanized and dehumanized his city has become. Her vision is to open chapterhouses in every major city that would provide services for relic hunters and fortune seekers. |
| 4♠ | Coetta Zinzilar | Rookport City, Middlemark | One of the most notorious bravos in Rookport's dueling scene, Coetta is beautiful and bloodthirsty. She always |

| | | | |
| | | | goes the extra mile to try and humiliate her opponents. Her family was murdered by the gang called The Merry Satyrs and she has devoted her life to getting revenge on the blue-blooded members of that gang. |
| 5♠ | Benadene Broken-Shield | Arlhagen, Middlemark | Originally from Arlhagen, this member of the Sworn Shields has undertaken a personal quest to protect the common folk of Middlemark from the predations of Lord Blacksheaf . A few of her battle-brothers have offered to lend assistance, but she will need a lot more help to make a dent in Blacksheaf's Reavers . |
| 6♠ | Sir Roban the Red | Rookport, Middlemark | Sir Roban is currently lighting up the tourney circuit in Rookport. This unheralded knight from an insignificant house is winning honor and attention. Several influential nobles are already jockeying to secure him to their households, but he has his eyes set on higher prizes. |
| 7♠ | Brin Caleth | At large, Middlemark | Brin Caleth had been one of the best longsword instructors at the Royal Weapons Academy in Rookport City but grew tired of training fatuous nobles the art of not stabbing themselves during a duel. He wants to put his skills to better use in the adventurer's trade. |
| 8♠ | Arhanna Snowlock | At large, Middlemark | This Pilgrim of Anwyn wanders seldom traveled paths in Middlemark's wild places, hunting game and providing assistance to people who live off the land. Her quest is to achieve Sainthood by committing three Great Works in the name of her Lord. |
| 9♠ | Palander | Southern Middlemark | Palander is the newest member of the exclusive order of Warrior-Monks, The Ninety Nine . His specialties are intelligence gathering and sabotage. Palander's instructors are impressed by his grasp of tactics and believe he has the makings of being a great General someday. |
| 10♠ | Wulfgahn Crow-Feeder | At large, Varsaxia | This Varsaxian Carl is an ex-soldier who cemented his reputation by conducting a successful one man siege against a rival's stronghold. He refuses to serve any Thane now and is a soldier-of-fortune in the wild places of his bitter homeland. |
| J♠ | Lord Sevren Blacksheaf | At large, Middlemark | This bastard son of a Rookport noble is a brigand who has styled himself as a feudal lord. He is actively conquering other bandit gangs and forming them into an irregular army so that he can overtake poorly defended towns and castles. Authorities from both Rookport and the Benling League have placed large bounties on his head. |
| Q♠ | Finn Morkar | Arlhagen, Middlemark | One of the Rangers of the Concordium , Finn is urging his fellows to get more involved in politics. He thinks the Concordium needs to be a more active force for total freedom, not just "the Police Force of Neutrality". He wants to overthrow all organized government. |
| K♠ | The Void | Khosteji, Nainarv | A super assassin who has learned about the benefits of killing the Fated . He now actively hunts for them and wants to become the most powerful man in the world. To this end, he has created an organization called The Black Circle to help him in this aim. |

| A♠ | Zendigorn The Blood Dragon | Sarcross Kiel, Cinlu | A war-chief among the Cinlu people, known as the Blood Dragon. He's knocking off his rivals so that he can be dubbed the Supreme Warlord and initiate a campaign against Middlemark. |
| 2♥ | Rilyn Greeneyes | Dawnwood, East Middlemark | Rilyn is a nature-loving Benling hermit who dwells in the Dawnwood east of Denfast. | A♥ | Quesban Thrice-Blessed | At large, Nainarv | Word is rapidly spreading across the Nightlands that Quesban the Thrice-Blessed has a healing touch that can cure all maladies. This former potter has become an itinerant faith healer, providing comfort to the poor and sick in exchange for his daily bread. |
| Joker | The Leveller | At large, Middlemark | A strange wanderer who knows the truth of the Fated and is working through a number of proxies to make sure no one group becomes too powerful. Has hired the Invisible Collegium to be his eyes, ears and arms. |

Appendix C: Timeline

Each of the Fated has a particular agenda that they are trying to advance. As time passes and as the party begins to unravel the truth of their destinies, the other powers of the world will not remain idle. Use the timelines below to loosely plan out the next year of maneuvers that the Fated will make. Some of these events could have far-reaching impacts; others could put different factions of the Fated in conflict with each other or with the party.

Fated who have their signs usurped by Player Characters remain in the world and continue to stir up trouble just as if they had been Star-Marked – they just won't be able to gain the powers that go along with their celestial inheritance.

| Fated Name | Spring, Year 1 | Summer, Year 1 | Autumn, Year 1 | Winter, Year 1 |

Begins tracking The Void . |

In successive years, events should begin to spiral into world-spanning conflicts. The longer the Fated remain alive, the more of a gravitational pull they have over the lives and destinies of other mortals. Where matters end up should remain entirely between the Fatemaster and the Players; let the outcomes form organically.

Appendix D: Ancient History

The History of Skaern is broken up into Ages which broadly correlate to generational spans of time (anywhere from 40-80 years, with a couple of notable exceptions). Anyone with a Knowledge of Ancient History would be familiar in passing with the major events of the most recent Ages. There are professional sages who would know a great deal more, but these individuals must be sought out (in places of learning such as the University of Merkish or the Scintillarium).

The length of an Age is tied to the lives of the Fated that live during that time. When the last Fated of an Age dies, that Age ends and the next one is able to begin (with the births of 53 new Fated individuals); as they mature and become aware of their powers, these Fated begin to determine what shape the new Age will take. The Fated are usually human, but there have been times when non-human Fated have presided over Ages that were hundreds of years in length (the Age of Rolling Thunder, in particular).

After the Age of Heroes years are counted by the notation S.R. (Sage's Reckoning)

| Age | Years | Description |
|-------------------------|---------------|---|
| Age of Ancient Musings | ?? | The first human settlements are founded by the very first generation of Fated . Their names and the oral histories of their exploits are permanently lost. It is believed they created "seed cultures" all over Skaern. All of the subsequent civilizations owe their existence to these mysterious "Founders". |
| Age of Crimson Rain | ?? | The "First Great War" in human history is waged during this Age . All of the first settlements are involved in a globe spanning conflict over territory and slaves. |
| Age of Burnished Bronze | ?? | The Dominion of Ardin emerges as the victor from the Age of Crimson Rain . Their fearsome Myrmidons murder innocents and civilians until an uneasy peace can be forged. The rule of the Dominion is harsh and absolute. |
| Age of Rolling Thunder | 300-400 Years | Also called the Age of Dragons , the Fated of this Age are almost entirely drawn from that terrible and magnificent race. Dragons encircle the globe, crushing the Dominion of Ardin and putting the human race in chains. Draconic fiefdoms are founded from which the eldest of their race rule over humanity like sultans. |
| Age of Living Gods | ~80 Years | This Age signals the beginning of recorded, written history. The Fated of this generation are known throughout the world because they are now worshipped as Gods. Among their many exploits, these heroes overthrow the Draconic Sultanates and, through some mysterious process, manage to achieve divine immortality. Some sages speculate this was accomplished through an unprecedented Convergence of Fated . |
| Age of Steel Flowers | 1 - 60 S.R. | After the Ascension of the Fated , numerous human kingdoms arise to fill the void left by the defeated Dragons. These kingdoms quickly declare war against one another to determine who will reign supreme over Skaern. The deeds of the legendary hero Killthandi are sung in virtually every hall. |
| First Age of Kings | 60-140 S.R. | As the Age of Steel Flowers wears on beyond the point of political endurance, several of the warring factions band together into large feudal Monarchies to hasten the end of hostilities. In Middlemark, the Kingdom of Caledwyr achieves hegemony over the region while in the Nightlands the Denshen Dynasty asserts itself as the principal power of the East. |
| Age of Smiling | 140-220 | After decades of peace, the military arts are replaced by espionage |

| Masks | S.R. | and dark magic. The practice of Necromancy and Sanguinomancy become widespread, spreading fear throughout the peasantry. Both Caledwyr and the Denshen Dynasty begin to rot from within. |
| Age of Black Desires | 220-260 S.R. | A global epidemic strikes Skaern, slaying hundreds of thousands of people. No civilization is spared from this plague. The authority of government recedes and small communities of people begin ruling themselves in a pseudo-tribal existence. The Cults of Malos run rampant. |
| Age of Spurned Wishes | 260-340 S.R. | The last two generations of black magic and plague produce an abnormal proliferation of inhuman beasts. Monsters begin appearing around the world in unsettling numbers. Humanity fights for survival against regular invasions and raids. |
| Age of Cleansing Fire | 340-400 S.R. | Pushed to the breaking point, the human races initiate genocidal pogroms against all species of monsters. Churches everywhere gain considerable power and Theocracies become the order of the day. Armies of merciless crusaders sacrifice beast and heretic alike on the Altar of Faith. In Nainarv, the monster-inhabited city of Gol-Duan is razed by the Argent Alliance , a confederacy of good-aligned paladins. |
| Age of the Beekeepers | 400 - 480 S.R. | Having stepped back from the brink of annihilation, the races of mankind enter into a period of intense religious devotion. Piety becomes the highest virtue and those exhibiting a lack of piety are brutally suppressed. Humanity takes to the seas in a serious way to spread their religious doctrines to other lands. |
| Age of Shooting Stars | 480 - 560 S.R. | This is a time of great maritime feats. Sailors circumnavigate the globe as they transport missionaries, diplomats and cargo to foreign lands. The science of Astronomy is born and Sages begin to arrange history into the now familiar Ages. The first real information about The Fated is recorded and studied. Varsaxia is colonized by a band of warriors from far-off Cinlu. |
| Age of Golden Omens | 560 - 640 S.R. | The religious fervor of the previous Ages begins to die down and is replaced by the secular fascination with money and commerce. The opening of foreign markets creates a new hunger for rare goods and cultures. A middle-class begins to emerge as merchants and guildsmen amass large amounts of private wealth. In Stro Machai, the City-State of Arlech becomes the richest place on Skaern. |
| Second Age of Kings | 640 - 720 S.R. | The Second Age of Kings places a capstone on the last several generations of stability and peace. The harmonious merger of the powers of church, state and guild produce three enduring regimes: the Kingdoms of Trendani and Melarid in Middlemark and the Sultanate of Khosteji in Nainarv. Cinlu becomes a Caliphate of Khosteji . |
| Age of New Twilights | 720 - 860 S.R. | Experimenters in the magical arts discover the existence of alternate Planes of Existence. Overwhelmed by curiosity, they amateurishly open several breaches into these other Realms and allow Demonic beings to issue forth. Several of the Fated from this Age are Demons so the span of the Age is longer than normal. It takes another supreme effort on the part of the human races to contain the planar invasion. The mad demon wizard Exion insinuates himself into the court of the Melarid King and presses for war against neighboring Trendani. |
| Age of Iron Words | 860 - 920 | With the end of the Twilight Wars , strict laws are put into place |

| | S.R. | everywhere governing the use of magic. Mage "registration" becomes common practice and special Colleges and Guilds are founded to properly train and control magic-users. As magic becomes institutionalized, its benefits to society become more apparent. Winterbright is tamed by the Alshadar who abandon their long-held settlements in Northwest Middlemark. |
| Age of Fulgent Candles | 920 - 1000 S.R. | This era of intense innovation and development is spurred on by the regulation of magic. New products, services and economies are created by new forms of commercialized wizardry. The stigma associated with being a mage is replaced by an admiration for their capabilities. The Principality of Sabine becomes especially famous for its dweomercraft goods. |
| Third Age of Kings | 1000 - 1080 S.R. | A powerful wizard named Traxilant begins to style himself as Emperor and musters an unbeatable, magic-using army in a bid to conquer the world. He largely succeeds, placing huge swaths of both hemispheres under his control. Traxilant puts Arlech to the sword and plunders its wealth to fund his war machine. The Sultanate of Khosteji remains conspicuously neutral during Traxilant's occupation. |
| Age of Eight Daggers | 1080 - 1130 S.R. | The embattled Kingdoms of Skaern fight a sustained rear-guard action against Traxilant's heirs, who desperately cling to the reins of power. Violence is commonplace and the rule of law is challenged everywhere. The Kingdoms of the Trendani and Melarid are both reduced by years-long sieges. In the most high profile uprising on the Age, the Duke of Highperch nearly succeeds in overthrowing the Trendani Monarchy. |
| Age of Shattered Wands | 1130 - 1190 S.R. | The reign of the last Traxilant ends and his Empire is carved up amongst several of his lieutenants. These Mage-Warlords begin warring against each other in a quest for pre-eminence. As they regain their feet, the established powers of Skaern play the Warlords off one another with bribes and promises of support. The legendary order known as The Ninety Nine single handedly take down Halenon Baleflame, the most powerful of Traxilant's consuls, in the Battle of Whitecliff . |
| Age of Bitter Harvests | 1190 - 1230 S.R. | The most brutal famine in recorded history occurs during this Age. The last of the Mage-Warlords surrender their ambitions as the food shortage puts unbearable strain on their already depleted resources. There are peasant revolts in every city and countless aristocrats are publically executed. The city of Standholm in Eastern Melarid is eradicated by a hideous plague. |
| Age of the Leviathan | 1230 - 1270 S.R. | An Age of unnaturally violent storms and climate fluctuations crushes Skaern in its grasp. Sea travel becomes almost impossible and the nations of Skaern temporarily lose contact with one another. The adventurer Viktus Blackblade carves a murderous swath through Middlemark, heaping infamy upon his name. |
| Fourth Age of Kings | 1270 - 1350 S.R. | Emerging from the tempests of the Age of the Leviathan , the reclusive Alshadar issue forth from their frozen home of Winterbright to establish an Empire that envelops the whole of Middlemark. Though their rule only lasts an Age, in that time they introduce cultural and administrative reforms that revitalize the West. |
| Current Age | 1351 S.R. | Though sages continue to debate what this new Age will augur the |
